Sanovo Technology Group Joins IPC

The world's largest producer of equipment for the egg industry, Sanovo Technology Group has joined the International Poultry Council as an associate member.

With its headquarters in Odense, Denmark, Sanovo is a leader in manufacturing egg-handling and processing equipment. Founded more than 60 years ago, Sanovo has most recently focused on developing new equipment for the hatchery industry, and supplies a range of hatchery packers and in-ovo vaccination systems for hatching eggs.

Sanovo also specializes in other areas, such as enzymes, pharma, robotic automation and spray-drying, and supplies equipment and services across a broad spectrum of the global egg and hatchery industries.

Sanovo Technology Group is part an international group of companies owned by Thornico, which is owned by Thor Stadil and his son Christian. Thornico is comprised of a large portfolio of companies with interests in the food industry and in other areas, including shipping, real estate, sportswear, packaging, food ingredients and technology.

The company's IPC representative is Thor Stadil, who may be contacted at ts@ls-holding.com.
